

From the farm fields still afield from life in the urban center, the Mirror Cull has uprooted and has given way to a musical adventure that is sure to be fueled by a lust for life, For as the garden grows each year, a different flavour and new interpretations of the past as it represents a classic dance with the eternal song which connects us all by tradition or circumstance!

A creation by Daniel Morreale, AKA The Peasant Farmer. Based in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, Previously his musical project "Fungal Lore", with fellow farmer Rodrigo Venturelli, rocked it out on the southern ontario organic farm circuit, with their brand of psychedelic folk ala woody Guthrie meets Rage against the machine. The Fungal Lore became a Fungal sclerotium (pause indefinitely).

Now The Mirror Cull has begun a new chapter in the world of music and art. Pigeon holes are for pigeons and shouldn't be used to compensate for lack of imagination. So File that one under fuckin cool! How about something new? the first demo/ep aptly titled "demoralized". What is this all about? The writing on the wall? Women? Tequila? There are just too many things to consider, and not enough facts to prove anything. So best we just enjoy the moments while they last and move our focus to the future and what we are doing about it today even if it means simply enjoying some music!

Morreale has written, performed and produced this new ep/demo independently. Previously he had published a magazine called the Free Spirit, was the music editor of the Secondary Press and was a campus radio dj at CFMU at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario
